Scenario 1: Maximum return

As long as the underlying never trades at or above the barrier level at any time during the lifetime of the product, you participate at 100% in the positive performance of the underlying. Therefore, if the underlying closes slightly below (without touching) the barrier level, you will achieve the maximum return.

Scenario 3: Capital protection on the redemption date

If no barrier event has occurred and the underlying closes at or below the strike level on the expiration date, you will be repaid 100% of the nominal value without any additional payment.

Scenario 2: Rebate payment

Should the underlying trade at or above the barrier level at any time during the lifetime of the product, you will not participate in the performance of the underlying. Instead, you will receive a rebate payment of 5% on the redemption date, insuring you a certain return.
